The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1, 2 and 6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Schuchardt (DE ('838).

In particular, the abstract indicates that the ventilation lines can be downstream of the jet pump and since the shown vent is at the highest point of the inlet line to the jet pump, it would have been obvious to place any vent downstream of the pump also at the high point in that line. Also, Figure 1 appears to show a resilient member used as the closure, while Figure 2 clearly uses a "stiff wall" element.

Claim 3 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Schuchardt in view of WO ('138).

WO ('138) applies (as noted in the Foreign Search Report) in that it teaches a bolt element used to control a vent valve. Since the bolt of the reference would be held open by high fluid pressure in the chamber, this device would have been an obvious way to vent the jet pump line of Schuchardt.

Claim 5 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Schuchardt in view of Schuster.

Schuster teaches a float valve used to vent air in a fluid passage, thereby making this an obvious element to use for sensing low flow in Schuchardt.

Claim 4 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Schuchardt in view of Sawamoto.

Sawamoto teaches using a hinged wall to close a vapor vent for a fluid chamber, thereby making this an obvious mechanical expedient for closing the feed line of the Schuchardt jet pump.

Claim 7 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Schuchardt in view of Germany ('287).

Germany ('287) clearly teaches the use of a flexible wall to vent fluid flow and, since Schuchardt appears to show such an element in Figure 1, it would have been obvious to use this type of vent valve in Schuchardt.

Claim 8 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

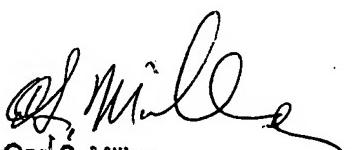

In particular, this claim is alternative in nature beyond being simply broad. In this instance the claim limitations are simply too unclear.

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.
